

'Sonic' boom

New Yorkers hungry for burgers and nostalgia can look no further than 12 miles across the Hudson River this weekend.

Sonic Drive-in, the burger chain where rollerskating staff deliver piping hot burgers and fries to parked cars, has finally made it to the metro area.

Rather than make the 60-mile journey to the next closest location in Pennsylvania, fans of the chain will be able to eat in Hasbrouck Heights, NJ, starting tomorrow.

Kirsten Fleming

